Brutality of Mob.

The Novoe Vremya, the only unofficial paper to appear to-day, declares the nation "seems determined to commit haribari," and reviews the bestality of the mulineers at Cronated in their attacks upon the efficers as showing what the country may expect if the mob gets the niper hand.

The paper says the mulineers tied a rope, with a stone at one end, around the neck of one of the officers and threw him into a lake, where he was drowned; beat in the face of another officer with the butt of a rifle; and broke the legs of Mme. Jacobi, a sister of Colonel Alexandroff, who threw horself between her brother and some sailors, while the latter were foreing their way into their house, and stabled her to death with bayonets. It turns out that the servants of Colonel Alexandroff and Captain Vichinsky delivered them to the mulineers and these servants were among the immederers who were tried by drumhead court-martial and shot. When they were offered the services of a priest, six of the men sentenced to death refused to accept the sacrament and only expressed repentence.

A prelamation was therefore prepared by the revolutionary leaders recting these alleged facts and warning the workmen to be on their guard against such provocators.
